FIRST RACE

Columbia Leads In Drifting Match.

Race To Be Sailed Over Again On Saturday.

The Large Crowd Present Return Home Disappointed.

SOON ADJOURNED.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The Schley court was in session today for only one and three quarters hours, adjourning at 12:45 o'clock to permit its members and others engaged there to attend the funeral of Judge Wilson, late chief counsel for Admiral Schley. Captain Wise concluded his testimony. Admiral Cotton made a brief statement on being recalled. Machinist Gray, who was in charge of the starboard engine on the Brooklyn during the day of the battle of Santiago, also testified briefly. He said that on the day of the battle the starboard engine was stopped and the machinery reversed. Captain Wise was questioned at considerable length as to what he had done before the arrival of Admiral Schley off Santiago toward locating Cervera's fleet in the harbor. He said that while he had satisfied himself of the presence of the Spanish fleet, he had been content to communicate his knowledge to Admiral Schley, through Captain Sigbee, not considering it necessary to make direct communication with the commander in chief. Lieut. Spencer S. Wood, who commanded the dispatch boat Dupont during the Spanish war, began his testimony. Lieut. Wood gave the particulars of his delivery of despatches from Admiral Sampson to Admiral Schley on the 22d of May, while the admiral lay off Cienfuegos. He said that Schley seemed very nervous and especially anxious to know what Sampson's intentions were. He had not concluded when court adjourned.

ALL PERISHED.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Sept. 26.—Three persons, Norman Moore, Thomas Murray and a girl were drowned yesterday, in Conception Bay. They had a boat load of fish for market and were near their destination, when the boat was overturned in a squall. All perished within sight of hundreds on the shore.

LOOK OUT FOR THEM.

Don't be too hasty in admitting strangers into the house. Consider well the purpose they claim to have in asking to come in. It is a good idea to be on the lookout constantly for sneak thieving. A few days ago Portsmouth was visited by a fellow who got into a number of places on the excuse that he was sent to test the gas meter. Now that is a reasonable thing to some people, but it is a big fake in fact. The gas company employs no one to go from house to house and make "tests" of the meter. This man had nothing but a little note book and a pencil. He was undoubtedly a thief. If the chance presents itself, he is ready to grab anything of value and off with it. If he has an opportunity he arranges it that it might be easy for him to enter the house in the night time and gets a good idea of the house and its contents.

CAUGHT IN THE WEB.

The American author, Joseph Le Brandt, has won success because all his plays are healthful in tone, pure in purpose, full of comedy and treat of subjects that are interesting to the average theatre goer. Mr. Le Brandt is not only a successful author but a clever and capable actor, and therefore he gets the right results at all times, as he thoroughly understands how to stage his own plays. His latest play, Caught in the Web, to be presented at Music Hall this Friday evening, is a fascinating romance of detective life. It is a combination of pure humor with realism running rampant in every act. Gorgeously mounted and finely acted, it cannot help but amuse all classes of theatre-goers.

Harvard Commander Tells of Orders to Schley.

IMPORTANT POINTS DEVELOPED.

"Can't Coal Your Big Ships There," Meaning the St. Nicholas Mole, "but There Is No Question the Small Ships Can Coal."

Washington, Sept. 26.—The business of the Schley court was promptly resumed at the usual hour.

Admiral Schley stated that since the death of Judge Wilson Attorney General Isidor Rayner would be the leading counsel in his case and that he would be assisted by Captain James Parker of New Jersey and by Mr. M. A. Teague of Baltimore as an expert assistant.

The wall back of the court was adorned with a chart on a large scale, showing the ground site of the battle off Santiago on July 3.

The southern coast of Cuba in the vicinity of Santiago was plainly marked, and the points at which the Spanish ships went to the bottom or to the shore were all indicated in plain lettering.

There were also a number of trans- parent charts, which had been prepared overnight.

Engines Reversed.

The first witness called was Mr. A. B. Claxton, first class machinist, who had charge of the port engine of the Texas on the day of the battle.

Mr. Claxton said that on July 3, 1898, he had been on duty in the engine room of the Texas. The engine indicator had called for full speed ahead early in the morning, which had, within an hour after the beginning of the action, been changed to "full speed astern."

To his knowledge there had been no signal for the reversal of the engines. He said that he had been excused from service in the engine room, but still he knew that the engines were reversed for about two minutes.

The witness had said that the engine was stopped.

"What was the next change made in the indicator of the port engine of the Texas?" he was asked.

"Full speed astern."

"When was a further signal received by the indicator, and what was the signal?"

"Within the first hour of the engagement the direction was changed to full speed astern."

"Can you not give an estimate of the time when the signal was given for full speed astern and how long after the beginning of the action?"

"I could say within the first hour."

"As a matter of fact were the engines reversed?"

"They were for about two minutes."

Mr. Claxton was not questioned by Mr. Rayner.

Renf Adm'l Cotton Testifies.

Admiral Schley now commandant of the Norfolk navy yard, who commanded the auxiliary cruiser Harvard during the Spanish war, was the next witness.

He told of meeting the flying squadron, under Commodore Schley, off Santiago on May 27, 1898, and said that on that date he had delivered despatches to the then commodore from Admiral Sampson and the navy department. He had, he said, handed the Brooklyn about 16,000 miles.

"What conversation took place between yourself and Admiral Schley?" asked Captain Lee.

"It will be impossible for me to state the entire conversation. I was on board, generally speaking, from about 10:30 to about noon. The conversation naturally cover'd a very wide range, the most important part of which was of course relative to the disputes I had delivered."

"What was said about the dispatches?"

"I delivered to Commodore Schley the original cipher in which the dispatches had been received by me at St. Nicholas, and together with translations of these I passed them to Lieutenant Lee or the Harvard."

"I handed the cipher, orally to him in his cabin on the order of their date. He received them, read them and commented in a general way upon their purport, spoke of the documents he had had in getting them and then handed them to Lieutenant Lee or the Harvard."

"I handed the cipher, orally to him in his cabin on the order of their date. He received them, read them and commented in a general way upon their purport, spoke of the documents he had had in getting them and then handed them to Lieutenant Lee or the Harvard."

"I delivered to Commodore Schley the original cipher in which the dispatches had been received by me at St. Nicholas, and together with translations of these I passed them to Lieutenant Lee or the Harvard."

"He questioned me relative to the probability of coal being available at St. Nicholas and, consequently, I said, 'There is no question an small ships can coal there.' As to Grotto's comment, I know of no reason why you should not be able to coal there." The commodore made some remarks upon my statements, the purport of which I do not recall, but he acted as if he was about the right ships at St. Nicholas indeed."

Coaling Ships Dangerous.

"He questioned me relative to the probability of coal being available at St. Nicholas and, consequently, I said, 'There is no question an small ships can coal there.' As to Grotto's comment, I know of no reason why you should not be able to coal there." The commodore made some remarks upon my statements, the purport of which I do not recall, but he acted as if he was about the right ships at St. Nicholas indeed."

"I said, 'You can't coal our big ships there.' I had spent reference in my reply to the letter to the president and to the cruiser of the Brooklyn and New York class. I was, thinking of the fact that my own ship had been there and was of some 12,000 tons displacement and nearly 600 feet in length. Possibly on the favorable condition you would be able to coal the large ships there, but at a time." But the area of deposit, etc., in the anchorage of large ships, is so little that it was not practicable to coal at the very moment more than one large ship at a time, and in case the weather became bad she would immediately have to go to sea."

"I was anxious while I was there with the Harvard on account of the ice, and I would have left at once if the weather had been bad. Weather had come on. At remember I recollect no qualification as to Gonave channel."

"Was anything said at the time about going to Key West for coal?"

"Returning to what I said with reference to the difficulty which Commodore Schley stated to me he had had in getting coal on board of any of the ships at Cienfuegos, he said he was very anxious. The coal supply was getting short, the weather was bad, and it had been bad almost continuously."

"It was a very serious problem as to how or whether he could possibly get coal on board ships off Santiago. He said if he found the weather did not improve and he found it impracticable to coal there, he could only see one resort, and that was he would be compelled to return to Key West in order to supply his ships with coal."

"Having that question in view, he was apprehensive, and especially as to one ship, the Texas. He did not even know at that moment whether she had on board sufficient coal to enable her to return to Key West."

"During my visit he gave me an order to make signal a general signal, as I remember it, not limited to the flying squadron alone, to report whether the ships had sufficient coal to reach Key West."

"The signal was made, or at least I assume it was made. At all events, during my presence with Commodore Schley he received a report to the effect that all the ships, including the Texas, had sufficient coal to return to Key West. I think the commodore was very much relieved when he received this information."

"Shortly afterward, I should say within a few minutes, he directed a signal to be made preparatory for the ships to return to Key West."

SENTENCES PASSED ON.

Washington Gets a Batch of News From the Philippines.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Mail from the Philippines has been received at the war department. It included the records of crimes and misdemeanors tried by military commissions at Manila and elsewhere in the archipelago.

Four natives were tried and condemned on a charge of murdering American prisoners in violation of the laws of war. General Chaffee set aside their sentences of death and gave them the liberty on the ground that they obeyed orders.

A band of Filipino outlaws attacked and burned the town of Lungs and killed three natives with spears and clubs. Three of them were sentenced to be hanged, but this was commuted by General Chaffee to imprisonment at hard labor for life. Another native was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment at hard labor.

Another outlaw band seized Manuel Dantes, suspected of friendliness to the Americans, conveyed him to a newly prepared grave, buried him and shot him dead from behind. One of the band accused of firing the shot admitted that fact, but pleaded that he was acting on the orders of his superior officer. His plea did not suffice, as it was shown that no superior officer was present, and therefore General Chaffee approved of the death sentence.

That native surrounded the house of one Martin Gamarrat at Resiles, and when he failed to make his appearance in answer to their demands the house was set on fire. Gamarrat was seized while escaping and subsequently condemned. General Chaffee commuted the death sentence of four of the natives to imprisonment for life, and the sentences of the remainder were reduced from thirty to fifteen years' imprisonment at hard labor.

"A Turk, captured just before this party was, was taken up the mountain and beaten to death before their eyes. Though I know nothing as to which direction the captives were taken, I think it most likely that they will be brought to Bulgaria."

"It seems that this detention of all the party kept the Turkish government from getting any knowledge of even the presence of brigands until about noon of the 14th and gave those outlaws a chance of carrying their captives to a place far distant from the scene of their capture."

"A Turk, captured just before this party was, was taken up the mountain and beaten to death before their eyes. Though I know nothing as to which direction the captives were taken, I think it most likely that they will be brought to Bulgaria."

"It is very probable that a large proportion of the brigands make Bulgaria their headquarters."

"When the Turkish troops get thinned out enough to chase the brigands, these latter will naturally prefer Bulgarian civilization to Turkish rule."

"If they get quiet across the border into Bulgaria, they can peacefully coerce their victims and by keeping quiet live honorable lives till they get their share of the ransom."

"A Bulgarian army officer came today, sent by the government to learn about these brigands. He said they had special instructions and that they would guard their border very closely."

NOW HELD FOR RANSOM

Official Notice of Miss Stone's Capture.

A LETTER GIVING THE DETAILS.

Whole Party Were Stopped in a Narrow Valley and Compelled to Wade a River and Climb a Mountain Side. Our Consul Looking into the Case.

Boston, Sept. 26.—The following letter, giving for the first time the details of the capture by brigands of the American missionary, Miss Ellen M. Stone, and her Bible woman, Mrs. Tsilka, has just been received by the American consul from Samook, Turkey.

"It was a very serious problem as to how or whether he could possibly get coal on board ships off Santiago. He said if he found the weather did not improve and he found it impracticable to coal there, he could only see one resort, and that was he would be compelled to return to Key West in order to supply his ships with coal."

At all events, during my presence with Commodore Schley he received a report to the effect that all the ships, including the Texas, had sufficient coal to return to Key West. I think the commodore was very much relieved when he received this information."

"Just before sunset two of our students were captured and carried off by a band of brigands on Sept. 3 about 4 p.m., while on their way, with quite a company of friends, from Bansko to Djuma.

"I went to the government and informed them, that they might be able to help us to bring these outlaws should they attempt to bring their captives in."

"Workman of Cambridge tried for a record, but he was unable to break 1m. 52 2/3s, established by C. H. Kilpatrick six years ago.

Rust of Harvard won the quarter mile run in 50 seconds, with Boardman of Yale his closest attendant.

In the one mile run Cawthra, Cockshot and Gregson, all of Cambridge, made the running and held the lead between them into the last lap. Knowles of Harvard then made his effort, but the best he could do was to pass Cawthra, who immediately dropped back. Clark of Harvard running into fourth place. They ran in this order into the stretch, with Cockshot twenty-five yards ahead.

"As to the actions of our gunboats before Rio Hacha during the last month, we were only watching Colombia's movements. We have not once purposely crossed the Colombian frontier. Possibly during the recent encounter with our soldiers inadvertently passed the indefinite mountainous boundary, but that is all, while Colombia has continually crossed our frontier."

"A fortnight ago the Colombian general Valenzuela and Vero and the Venezuelan general Ramon Garibaldi decided to invade Venezuela from Cucuta. We are still awaiting the invasion. Eleven thousand Venezuelan troops and about 8,000 Colombian troops are drawn up in facing lines along the frontier awaiting orders. Some trivial incident or unexpected shot may start a bloody conflict."

Carabin on the Philippines.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Adjutant General Corbin returned to Washington yesterday from the Philippines. He said: "I was greatly surprised to find our soldiers in such excellent health, that I saw but two others who were suffering from the effects of the climate. Our men are not only in good health, but are also in good spirits. The millennium will not come in a few days. It is going to come to the Philippines, however, in the next five or six years. I am of opinion that within another year the military force can be reduced to about 25,000 men, and they will be well employed for their moral effect."

The statements that no foreigners are allowed to go into Manchuria are to an extent true. Only Russians and Chinese are granted for twenty years, and are made to pay a new tax on the frontier. Our soldiers are not granted for twenty years, and are not satisfied with the amount of pay they receive. We are not better off in Asia.

American goods are already known and favored on account of their cheapness.

Mr. Greener says: "The Russian's policy is one of conciliation. He knows how to deal with Chinese. He will not supersede the Manchou as an aristocrat, however, or even as a minor. It will be some time before he is a factor, in the western sense, in either Manchuria."

The area of goldfields in Manchuria, says Mr. Greener, extends more than 1,127 miles along the shores of the Amur and Ussuri rivers, and there is no doubt as to the richness of the mines. He says that small parties of Russians, illegally mining there, earned from $30 to $100 a day.

The statements that no foreigners are allowed to go into Manchuria are to an extent true. Only Russians and Chinese are granted for twenty years, and are made to pay a new tax on the frontier. Our soldiers are not granted for twenty years, and are not satisfied with the amount of pay they receive. We are not better off in Asia.

ONE OF THE MOST POPULAR WOMEN IN THE PINE TREE STATE.

She Learns In a Tank—Women and Dreams—Gowns For the Plaza—A Southern Girl Orator—The Topaz Reigns.

The governor of Maine is always an interesting personality, no matter who he may be. He is always a man who is nominated and elected for other in addition to political reasons. But the wife of the governor of Maine is a woman who is not often known outside of her immediate circle. The social functions of the governor of Maine are not numerous.

The wife of the present governor of Maine, Mrs. Hill, is, however, a woman who would grace any circle. She is a fine type of New England womanhood. Everybody in Maine is proud of her. The other day there was a great gathering of Maine people at Poland Spring. Governor Hill and his wife were there. The young generation of the old state was also there, but Mrs. Hill, it was remarked, was the most striking woman in the multitude. This was not alone because she is the wife of the governor of Maine, but because of her splendid womanhood. If Mrs. Hill made up her mind that she wanted her husband to go to the United States senate, she would doubtless succeed.—New York World.

She Learns In a Tank. This summer's girl will know how to swim if one may judge by the number of young women to be found in the Turkish bath tanks at unnaturally early hours in the morning practicing fancy strokes or sometimes taking lessons from an attendant.

Oddly enough, these girls say they learn more quickly in the tanks than at the regular swimming schools. At the schools most of the teachers use cork floats or trolley belts, and for some reason or other women fail to gain confidence while they have these artificial supports.

"I don't believe in the cork floats," said a Turkish bath attendant who numbers many New York women among her swimming pupils. "They give some aid in acquiring the proper movements, but they fail to give the learner confidence in herself at the very beginning. Once she has learned with a belt she must begin and learn all over again without it."

The best way is to learn in a tank before going into deep water at all. The very first lesson in swimming is to make the pupil confident. If she strikes out in a tank, she knows that if she goes under she has only to pick herself up again.

"Sometimes I have stretched a rope half way across the tank and have shown the learner that it is possible to reach it from the steps by pushing the foot back against the steps as one starts. Once this has been done successfully and the swimmer has caught the rope at the end of the drive she has learned an important lesson—that is, that the water will bear her up if the body is properly poised."

"Women learn to swim easily enough, but they are slow in acquiring style. They will not go slowly enough, and they never, or at least very rarely, understand the impetus that sends the body along through the water. They depend too much on the hands and legs. But style in swimming means much besides being graceful, for it indicates courage, coolness, self confidence and a thorough enjoyment of the exercise."

"Women soon learn to use their arms gracefully, but their leg movements are wild and terrible. To cure this I have often had swimmers hold on to the side rail of the tank and practice the leg stroke only. Sometimes I take the pupil's feet in my hands and move the limbs automatically in the proper time, counting for each movement. After guiding the pupil in this way she will count as she swims alone and finally masters the motion."

Sarah's Accomplishments. Sarah Berhardt's accomplishments are so numerous and varied that one is quite bewildered at so much talent in an individual. But, then, there is only one Sarah on this little planet. She is a painter and sculptor of merit. At the exhibition of 1900 one of her most pathetic pieces of sculpture was called "Apres le Temps." She has written several plays, which have been brought out in Paris, and is also the author of a variety of books, including novels. When at her country house at Belle-Ile-sur-Mer, in Brittany, she is found fishing and boating when she is not playing tennis or cycling.

The Turquoise.

The turquoise just now is enjoying an amount of popularity. Those who cannot afford the real stone buy imitations. They are worn in the hair, at the throat or waist and sometimes on the black patent leather slippers. Lace bracelets or bangles are these new ornaments, but old fashioned arm and—well, no, we have not yet begun to fill our teeth with them.

lets that clasp the white members above the elbows.

Won Job and Husband.

When the proprietors of drug stores first began to employ women prescription clerks, the men did not propose to stand this infringement on their territory if they could help it.

In one case of this kind in New York the male clerks first demurred and carried the report of their resolution to their employer, who had engaged what they derisively termed the "woman prescription." Ultimately they all refused to work unless the young woman was discharged.

The woman in question was young, courageous and capable. When the proprietor told her, she promptly replied that she hoped to stay if he were satisfied with her accuracy in filling prescriptions. She remained. The men, fearing that they must act up to the requirements of their joint resolution, all left. Their places were filled without the least trouble, and the proprietor found the "woman prescription" such a valuable thing that he secured it as his patent right by marrying the girl. He now has a faithful and competent partner as well as first class prescription clerk.—Home Magazine.

About Summer Diet.

A physician who has reduced the science of health to a system of diet and exercise, with abundant bathing, declares that no meats, excepting lamb and chicken, should be eaten in hot weather, to which list, however, he adds fresh fish. Certain it is that much meat is unnecessary for even laboring men with the mercury among the nines. The lazy West Indian negro grows fat on conchus and bananas, the East Indian cooly tolls all day long on his rations of rice. The hardy Arab conquered the world on a diet of dates and barley bread and ceased to be the terror of Europe only when he found such fare too simple for his taste. Cereal and milk for breakfast, bread and eggs with fruit for luncheon, soup and vegetables, with little or no meat, and a salad, may be the chief of the summer diet, in which there is sufficient nutriment. Oatmeal as a cereal is too heating to the blood to be advised. In fact, heavy workers, such as farmers, are alone the people for whom a steady diet of oatmeal is wholesome.

Growth of Day Nurseries.

One of the significant facts of city life is the growth of the day nurseries. They have grown at the rate of 200 per cent in the last five or six years. Originally intended for the babies of widows, it is found that 90 per cent of the children in day nurseries have both parents living. The mother is obliged to go out to work because her husband is out of work or is ill and cannot work or is dissipated.

Even with the rapid increase in the number of day nurseries there is always a surplus of applicants. Whether this indicates that more and more married women are becoming wage earners as well as housekeepers, whether it means that more and more fathers cannot support their families or that they are losing their sense of responsibility in the matter and do not try, is an interesting question.—Harper's Bazaar.

Women Artists at London Academy. No fewer than 270 women artists are represented this year at the Royal Academy in London by works in oil, water color, black and white, marble or metal. This is a falling off of about 20 from last year's exhibit, but this is not surprising when it is understood that the total works of all kinds in the present academy is only 1,523 as compared with 2,057 last year. The women's exhibit consists of 150 miniatures, 118 paintings in oil, 55 water colors and pastels, 20 works of various kinds in black and white and 23 examples in the sculpture galleries. One of the most admired of all the works in this year's academy, either by men or women, is Mrs. M. L. Waller's "Bobby Abercromby." It is described as a "sympathetic study of childhood" by the critics and declared to be clever.—Chicago Tribune.

The New "Economy" Trick. It is a wise husband who gives his wife only new bills fresh from the bank. There are many wives who are always kept in fresh bills, and perhaps no one has surmised that there was method in this. It is a woman who has given the man away at last.

"I spend twice as much money when I have old bills as when I have new," she says. "I simply hate those dirty old bills. I can't bear to have them in my purse, and I take the first opportunity to get rid of them. When I have new money, it is so crisp and clean that it is a pleasure in itself. And I think twice before I buy anything which will take it away from me."

The Topaz Reigns.

Last winter the fashionable woman who could not possess a pearl or two in her jewel box felt that all the world stood awry. Every woman she knew wore pearls set in some form or other, and during the craze diamonds' for a time lost their prestige.

Just now jewelers are polishing up and setting their supply of topazes, for the time seems ripe for a reappearance of the golden stone. Topazes must be set with amethysts and sapphires to give the good effect of contrasts. Sapphires more particularly will be favored, so nearly does the blue match the glowing purple of the cornflower.

The jewel windows show topazes wonderfully set in ornaments of delicately carved tortoise shell, combs fretted out as fine as lacework and sprinkled everywhere with topazes in every shade, from pale straw color to deepest yellow.

Tortoise shell is the chosen setting for the new favorite, and besides the fancy combs wonderful bracelets are being made of the richly colored shell. Scarf bracelets or bangles are these new ornaments, but old fashioned arm and—well, no, we have not yet begun to fill our teeth with them.

mammy, if their sleep has been visited with unusual visitors they seize this volume as soon as their eyes are fairly opened and look for an explanation. If misfortune is foretold by it, the seeker after knowledge assumes a bravado she is far from feeling. "I don't care," she says to herself by way of bolstering up her courage. "I'm not superstitious, anyway, and I don't believe in such arrant nonsense." But she's nervous just the same for days, until other troubles have driven this mythical one out of her mind.

There's one young woman known to the writer who never dreams of a young child without shivering and shaking for days after in fear of some dreadful thing happening to her. She has not consulted a dreambook on the subject, and so she doesn't know how infants and bad luck became connected in her mind, but nevertheless, after she has had a visitant of this sort while sleeping, she says prayers of unusual length and then makes up her mind to be patient under afflictions sore. She is an intelligent woman, mind you, but she doesn't attempt to explain the terror that besets her at this particular dream. She doesn't call herself superstitious—of course, no woman does, not even the one who won't walk under a ladder—but her friends do and make light of her until she exposes some fetich of theirs, when the subject is carefully avoided afterward.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Gowns For the Plaza.

In making a choice of summer models for piazza gowns one has every right to lay a claim to the chief d'oeuvre of the couturiere's art. The freedom of a choice like this means a great deal to the summer girl. Never before has summer attire seemed quite so seductive. Can the athletic girl forego the temptation and content herself with a half dozen or more duck skirts and a score of spiced and span shirt waists this summer while her more coquettish sister revels in these bewitching confections? One is confronted with an embarrassment of choice among styles this season. The angular woman may favor the flounced and tucked skirt and claim all that she desires in fru fru effects. The all too plump woman may have the upper part of her skirt made on glove fitting principles and reverse all of the adornment of the lower part. In matters of sleeve and corsage the same expensive rule holds good. After all, to strive for becomingness is the duty that lies nearest, says the Montreal Star.

We are simply dazed by the quantity, the bewitching quality of the quantity, of gauzy summer fabrics. A great many of our old, tried and trusted are with us again, but boast enough change in their warp and weave to entitle a little change in the termination of their names. Gauzing claims a bit more stamina than guaze. Mulline for the same reason is superior to mull.

Organic again claims recognition. It boasts designs as delicate as the most exquisite seen on the hand painted gauzes and is a delightful material to make up for piazza gowns.

A Southern Girl Orator.

One of the most notable events of the recent state convention of United Confederate Veterans at Columbia, S. C., was the address of welcome delivered at the opening session in Columbia theater by Miss Elizabeth Lumpkin, a Georgia girl, but now a resident of Columbia. The theater was packed with an audience of not less than 2,000 people, largely old soldiers, and on the stage were such famous soldiers as Generals Wade Hampton and John B. Gordon. After several other speeches had been made Miss Lumpkin, a young woman dressed in white and with roses in her hair, was introduced as a Georgia girl now living here, who would welcome the visitors to her adopted home."

The oration which followed took the house by storm. An eyewitness relates that the chief justice of South Carolina, who was present, sat with tears streaming down his face during the pathetic parts of the address. "I cannot thank you enough for coming, you Georgians," said Miss Lumpkin at one point in her speech. "They call me a 'Georgia cracker,' but little do they know how proud I am of the title. Give me a horse and the knowledge that I am a 'Georgia cracker,' and I'll ride the world down for you."

The south has long been noted as the home of great orators, but until now all such have been members of the sterner sex. In Miss Lumpkin, however, there is an instance of a daughter of the south who seems as richly endowed with the oratorical gift as any of the sons have ever had.—Leslie's Weekly.

BAITING THE ENSIGN

UNHAPPY LIFE OF THE GERMAN ARMY CANDIDATE OFFICER.

The Petty Miseries and Humiliations to Which the Unfortunate Youngster Is Subjected by His Superiors In Public Places.

(Special Correspondence.)

In Germany the prestige of the uniform is often bought at the price of petty miseries and humiliations. Hazing, when conducted in the intimacy of the military school, among youths of the same age, has at least the saving quality of privacy, but the baiting of the unhappy candidate officer, which is a feature of the German service, carries with it the added humiliation of being made to amuse both superior officers and the outside public.

The young candidate officer is obliged by the regulations to live with the officers, to take his meals with them and to pass all his leisure hours in their society. At the end of the day, tired out with the fatigues of a service still new to him, the poor fellow would rather go to bed. But no, he must follow them to the cabin or the beer halls. "Come, come! A young fellow of your age to be tired! You mustn't!"

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant," he is bound to reply. "I mustn't."

"You're all right. You're going to be one of us. Only you must not get tired."

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant."

"Perfectly. You will come to the beer garden with us. We will pick up the others. We will show ourselves. Do you know, my boy, you don't show yourself enough. I have heard it remarked. You isolate yourself too much. It is not permitted in an ensign. When you get to be captain or major, you will go out when you please, but for the instant you must come out with us."

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant."

Entering the beer garden the officer joins a group of friends, coolly abandoning the candidate to his fate, which is to find a chair and sit in a corner alone. No one notices him. He lights a cigar and sips a mug of beer. As no one addresses him and as he has not the right to open his mouth except to reply, "At your orders," he is silent. He finishes his second cigar. Suddenly one of the officers, pitying him, may hold up his mug of beer, saying, "To your health, ensign." He knows his etiquette. He rises, straightens up, and, as is moved by clockwork, raises his own mug to his lips and empties it at a single gulp.

Half an hour passes. Then a captain, it may be, will begin in a sympathetic tone, "I say, ensign, how old are you?"

"Twenty years old, Herr Captain."

"Hannover? Herr? You are old."

"At your orders, Herr Captain."

"My faith, here's to your health, ensign."

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant."

"I have often wanted to ask you the same question. How old are you?"

"Twenty years old, Herr Lieutenant."

"You are very old."

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant."

"My faith, to your health, ensign."

Up, gulp and down again. At last he imagines the hour of deliverance is at hand. It is then he ought, by the regulations, to be in bed. He starts to pay for his drinks.

"Where are you going, ensign?"

"I must go in. I have not permission."

"Go on, but no, my friend. Stay with us, quiet and comfortable. You don't need any permission so long as you are with us. We'll take you back."

"At your orders, Herr Commandant."

"Waiter, a beer."

Still higher officers at the lower end of the table, pretending to notice for the first time the silence of the young candidate, express the desire to hear him speak. How otherwise would they be able to judge his abilities?

One of his lieutenants begins with him, "When do you go to the school of war, ensign?"

"Oct. 1, Herr Lieutenant."

"Do you know where you are to go?"

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant, I shall probably be sent to Hanover."

"Thunder, what luck!"

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant."

"My faith, here's to your health!"

Up, gulp and down again. Silence.

"Where are you to be named officer?"

"In eighteen months, Herr Lieutenant."

"How old are you?"

"Twenty years old, Herr Lieutenant."

"Thunder and hail, but you're old!"

"How old did you say you were?"

"I am still another as if burning with curiosity."

"Twenty years old, Herr Lieutenant. I am very old."

"You—oh—perfectly!"

And when the company breaks up this last officer will say to the others: "A good sort of chap, our ensign. It's a pity he is so impudent."

That "last ditch" of the Boers seems to be some hundreds of miles wide.

When English papers criticise the conduct of murder trials in this country the best policy in reply is silence.

The Boers continue to rush British lives in a manner that undoubtedly excites more regret in Lord Kitchener than he cares to express.

A new theory is that monkeys are deteriorating men springing from children lost in the woods. There is one link too many in this proposition, and that is the tail.

If the Virginia constitution makers have any say in the matter, there will be less freedom of speech of the pernicious sort in that state in the future than there has been in the past. The probability is that Virginia's example in this respect will not be followed by many other states, yet a little restriction in the liberty of talk in certain directions would get the sanction of the people at the present time.

Several southern papers say there is no danger that President Roosevelt will be a "narrow sectionalist." They are right. Everybody knew and conceded that President McKinley was not a sectionalist. No president will be a sectionalist in this country, although one or two of them were compelled by circumstances to appear so. This was only on the surface, however. Lincoln, who seemed to the South during the war to have been a sectional president, was in reality a warm well-wisher of the South, as that region discovered afterward. There is no longer any South or North in a political sense.

The decorous trial and speedy conviction of the wretched man that murdered the president carry far on to its inevitable end an incident every chapter of which has been a rebuking answer to the purposes of the murderer, a vindication of the system with which he and his kind are at feud. He had said he thought William McKinley had received "too much service" for mortal man; but the bullet he fired made universal the expressions of regard that were to him hateful. He has said that he did not believe in law; but law has vindicated its perfect majesty on his own person by guarding him carefully from vengeance, trying him fairly and convicting expeditiously. He has said that he did not believe in a hereafter; he will soon have an opportunity to test his belief in person. Through his own deeds he is compelled by a profound irony of fate to furnish a complete refutation of the creed he professed. He will die as the fool dieth.

FOOT BALL GAME SATURDAY.

There will be a football game on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, at the navy yard grounds, between the Marine team and the Kittery eleven.

The bather sometimes finds the sand soft and yielding to his feet. It does not trouble him and he goes on until presently he sinks to his knees and discovers to his horror that he has to fight for life in a quicksand.

Disease is much like the quicksand. The first symptoms of stomach trouble do not cause anxiety. But when the body grows weak through lack of nourishment and disease of the stomach breeds disease of heart, lungs, liver or kidneys the sufferer realizes his danger and seeks for medical aid.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, etc., when these diseases have their origin in disease of the stomach and all its allied organs.

Thomas A. Swarts, of Sub-Station C, Columbus, Ohio, has sold it for 12 years. I was taken with severe headache then came to Dr. Pierce and my food would not digest then kidney and liver trouble and my back got weak so I could not get around. I had all the complaints of the body and the more I got the worse I got until six years passed. I had become so poor I could only walk in the house by the aid of a chair and I got so thin I had to give up all my clothes. I then went to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of myself. The first bottle I took I thought I would get another, and after the first bottle I took it in about six weeks I was weighed and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) pounds. I have done more than work in the past eleven months than I did in the past six years. I am about and healthy to day. I think, as I can, as well as

On motion of Emmons B. Philbrick of Rye the club voted its thanks and appreciation for the very competent and faithful service of the president and secretary during the past year.

Resolutions in respect to the memory of President McKinley were proposed by Col. R. N. Ewell of Exeter, and were accepted and adopted. Remarks on the resolution were made by Charles E. Smith of Newfields, Dr. S. F. A. Pickering of Portsmouth, President Albert Severance of Exeter and Herbert D. Dow of Portsmouth.

The meeting then adjourned without anything else of significance occurring.

Collapsing and Exploding Boilers.

"There is a good deal of inaccuracy in the popular talk about boilers blowing up or exploding," said an old boiler maker.

"If too much pressure is exerted on the interior of a boiler which is weak in any part, the weak part will give and the boiler will collapse. If anybody is standing near it at the time, he runs the risk of being killed by the steam, but the boiler stays just where it was and nothing is wrecked but the boiler. This is what sometimes happens to kitchen boilers, which never can, in the true sense, blow up or explode. But when the boiler is equally strong in every part and steam is generated so suddenly that it has no chance to escape through the safety valve a real explosion occurs; the boiler is torn from its fastenings and tears through the air like a tremendous cannon ball. Such an explosion is attended by a general wreck of everything in the path of the boiler and usually by horrible

ALL READY TO FIRE.

EXCITING INCIDENT AT A CENTRAL AMERICAN EXECUTION.

Why the Hand That Was Raised to Give the Death Signal Gave Instead a Cigarette to the Man Who Had Been Condemned to Die.

"As was brought home to the American mind during the Spanish war the Latin races place slight value upon human life, and the indifference shown at executions is a marked characteristic of their natures," said a Boston man.

"I am reminded of a scene I witnessed while traveling in one of the Central American states several years ago. As we all know, revolutions there are frequent occurrence. The successful general, who usually succeeds to the presidency, sometimes settles his differences with the leaders of the vanquished by exiling them or having them stood up against an adobe wall before a file of soldiers, shot and buried where they fall—usually the latter.

"While at the capital of one of these states shortly after the termination of a revolution I made the acquaintance of the president and several of his officers, as I speak Spanish fluently. One morning as I was passing the entrance to the palace I encountered an officer, a colonel, just as he emerged from the portico. He greeted me pleasantly and asked me if I would care to accompany him to the barracks, about a quarter of a mile distant, saying that one of the leaders of the just finished revolution had been unexpectedly captured in the mountains, brought to the capital and was to be executed at noon by order of the president.

"He had, he said, since the revolution was related to him by family and because he personally stood high in the favor of the president, vainly interceded to secure the prisoner's release or commutation of sentence to banishment. The president, however, had ordered the execution to proceed, and as the colonel was in command of the barracks it became his painful duty to personally carry out the order.

"I assumed, as I had never seen an execution, and though I pitied the victim, I knew that anything I could do would not save him, excusing my colleague on that ground.

"Arriving in the courtyard of the barracks, I observed a file of soldiers standing at rest a short distance from a high adobe wall, close to which stood a man of middle age calmly smoking a cigarette. Beyond a quick glance at the colonel's immovable features he betrayed no sign of recognition or of the peril of his position. He must have known of course that the latter's mission had been a fruitless one. The execution was set at 12 o'clock noon. A young lieutenant stood idly by leaning on the hilt of his drawn saber. It was then five minutes of the hour.

"The colonel informed the lieutenant that he had left another friend of the condemned man with the president, and it was agreed if the president yielded to his pleadings he would step out on one of the little balconies peculiar to all Spanish buildings and discharge a pistol. All present heard the colonel's remarks, including the man against the wall, and all eyes sought the balcony of the palace, which on a slight rise of ground could be plainly seen in the clear, tropical sunlight.

"To me the suspense brought on a nervous chill which was decidedly unpleasant. The doomed man puffed quietly at his cigarette, and the little, undersized soldiers arrayed themselves in straight line as the colonel, watch in hand, stood near to give the fatal word. The lieutenant raised his sword preparatory to making a quick downward sweep as he would give the word to fire.

"On the other side of the barracks was the old mission or cathedral to be found in every Spanish town, with its bells in the tower which tolled the hours. At about one minute before 12 the colonel said:

"It's not 12 o'clock until the last stroke is struck, lieutenant."

"Just as he finished the first stroke of the deep, mellow old bell rang out on the still, hot atmosphere. The condemned man dropped his cigarette to the ground, turned a ghastly pallor, but straightened his figure upright and full to the soldiers who were then lined up, with rifles cocked, pointed at his heart. The colonel shifted his eyes from his watch to the balcony.

"It seemed an hour to me as the strokes slowly sounded two, three, four, five, six, and then as the seventh stroke was reverberating we saw the figure of a man leap through the window on the balcony, and a tiny puff of white smoke ascended from his uplifted arm.

"The colonel cried out sharply: 'Attention! Right about face; march!' The lieutenant slipped his sword in its scabbard with a snap, drew the inevitable package of cigarettes from his blouse, and as the condemned man ran toward us and clasped his relative gratefully in his arms he was politely offered a cigarette from the hand which the moment previous had been raised to give the signal of his death.

"I afterward learned that the friend whom the colonel had left at the palace was one of the most prominent merchants in the country, who had furnished a considerable portion of the funds with which the revolution had been conducted, and that at the last moment the president had consented to his demand for the release of the prisoner." —Washington Star.

The movement is made of Barre granite and is five feet square at the base. A statue of Jennie Wade of Italian marble surmounts the whole. This part is the work of a noted sculptor and was made in Italy. The entire height of the monument is twelve feet. The inscription on the front reads, "Jennie Wade, killed July 3, 1863, while making bread for Union soldiers." On the opposite side appears, " Erected by the Woman's Relief corps of Iowa." The Wade family motto, "What God willeth must be, though a nation mourn," is on the third side. The other face bears the simple epithet, "She hath done what she could."

Clothes and Character.

The philosophy of clothes grows out of their relationship to our personality and temperament. Not many of us are independent enough to do away ourselves from the influence of the garments which clothe and adorn us, not more so than of the other environments which prove such potent factors in the formation of our life and character. Personality and temperament are revealed by clothes, but what seems more important in the whole philosophy of the subject is that the outer garments affect our individuality, so that we are changed and transformed by what we wear. What clothes have done for civilization in the formation of character, mood, manners and conventional ideas of living is a subject too broad for superficial consideration.

The susceptibility of some to the influence of clothes is so keen that all individuality would be lost without the power to express themselves in this way. A woman may make clothes the artistic expression of her personality, which in no other way could assert itself. It has become to her a daily need, and the loss of it would take from her life a mainspring of action that would leave her stranded. There is a difference between the attempt to express in artistic form in dress an inward personality and the extravagant waste of money for clothes which have no direct bearing upon one's mind or ideas of the harmony of things. Lavish expenditure of money on dress for the mere sake of copying another or for the selfish and foolish purpose of being dressed as expensively as the richest is not only reprehensible, but is deficient in originality and art of expression.—Lester Monthly.

The Care of Oily Hair.

Too oily hair is the result of a poor circulation. It should be constantly attended to and washed every week. It is caused by too much grease between the skull and the scalp. It is bad grease and can only be removed by massage because massage is the only thing that will bring the blood to the surface. To pour a tonic on greasy hair is like pouring water on oily oil.

Greasy hair has large pores. It requires more washing, more soap or shampoo, less brushing and much massage.

The Whirl of Fashion.

The newest blouses of the season now shown have postilion backs and somewhat larger sleeves.

Many of the daintiest autumn gowns are made with narrow vests formed of Persian embroidery.

The raglan sleeve, which became quite popular last spring and which is cut in one with the shoulder portion, is used not only on wraps of various kinds, but also on blouses of silk, cloth and velvet.

Many of the silk waists just imported are made with postilion backs or that directive coattails. The sleeves are a trifle fuller on the top of silk or satin waists, but quite plain on bodies or other fabric.

A pretty English made costume with a skirt of black and white shepheard's check in silk and wool has a bolero of fine black chevrons, lined with white silk and trimmed with Byzantine designs in black silk cord laid over the silk.

Large stylized collars in single, double or triple form are seen on both fancy waists and wraps, and the Marie Antoinette hood is a feature of some of the season's princess redingotes, silk or light cloth. Newmarket and short cloaks for evening use.—New York Post.

JEWELRY JOTTINGS.

An oval stone of sea green hue is strikingly effective in a man's seal.

A novel use of coral is the plating together of straight pieces, like links of a chain, to form a broad watch fob.

An extremely taking shirt waist set of sleeve links and four buttons consists of round opals set in rather wide bands of bright gold.

Photo rings are the latest adaptation of a popular idea. In form these are gold signet rings, either plain or carved, in which a tiny photograph takes the place of the usual engraved device.—Jeweler's Circular Weekly.

Hot Water as a Cosmetic.

Far better for the complexion than any cosmetic compounded by a perfumer is the application of very hot water to the face with a wet cloth or hand.

A matron of fifty, whose charms are the envy of those of her acquaintances of half her years, has used this application many years. "Every night and morning," she says, "I give my face a thorough washing with a piece of white flannel in hot water. Once in a great while I use soap, but not often, as I have found the hot water, persistently very satisfactory.

If the skin has not been exposed to a great amount of dust, the water may be merely soaped upon the face at night, as once a day is often enough for the scrub. After the hot bath dash on a liberal quantity of cold water with the hands until the skin fairly glows. This is the cheapest and most wonderful cosmetic known. A month of such treatment will transform any complexion. My skin is much fairer and rosier now than when I was twenty. I had naturally a poor complexion, coarse and muddy. I tried many remedies, but they were very unsatisfactory, until one day an old lady whose skin I always had admired for its youthful appearance gave me the recipe. I tried it faithfully and before long saw with delight that my complexion was clearing."

Walking and Self Consciousness.

The peculiarities of gait of women make an interesting study if viewed from a large window overlooking a street on which there is much travel.

Every woman has a more or less "I know every one is looking at me" gait in passing a window and consequently does not walk as easily as she would if unconscious that she was being observed. If a woman is self conscious, her peculiarities of gait are accentuated. The pretty girl who is trying to look absolutely natural seems to be walking on peg legs; the long girl strides with longer and quicker steps, and the funny little fat woman puffs fussy along with shorter and quicker steps. If any one could get out a recipe for walking and label it "How to be natural though self conscious," women might profit by it and feel much more comfortable and walk more properly on the street. Women on the stage study a proper walk, and it would be well for women in private life to do the same.—New York News.

its head in oil to solder the cranium. It is then wrapped in a tight bundle, and its lips are touched with brandy to make it a full Briton.

Wish mothers, to insure the safety of their babies, put a pair of tons or a knife in the cradle.

As soon as a child is born a Turkish mother loads it with amulets, and a small oft mud, steeped in hot water, prepared by previous charms, is stuck on its forehead.

The King's Daughters' circle of ten girls chose for their motto these three words:

"Guard the Tongue." Their special promise to each other was to speak no evil and to listen to no evil reports or remarks about any one and to discourage all gossip, scandal and adverse criticism. They were all very nice girls. No one would have suspected them of the vulgar habit of gossiping or of saying unkind things of their companions or neighbors. Yet after one month under the new rule of restraining the tongue these girls, every one of them, confessed that they had been compelled to exercise great self-control in order to carry out their promise.

FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING.

State Firemen's Association Held

For Business and Pleasure.

John D. Randall of Portsmouth Re-elected Treasurer of Association.

Banquet at Odd Fellows' Hall and a Sail Later Down the Harbor.

The fourth annual meeting of the New Hampshire State Firemen's association was held in this city today. The delegates went into session at Philbrick's hall at 10:30 o'clock. There was a very large attendance and the convention was an enthusiastic and interesting one.

The meeting was called to order by Chief Green of Concord, who, after calling the convention to order, introduced Hon. E. E. McIntire, who welcomed the delegates, in behalf of the city. The mayor's welcome was a warm one and was well voiced. The Rev. George E. Leighton of the Universalist church offered prayer. Chief John D. Randall welcomed the delegates, in behalf of the Portsmouth Fire Department.

The election of officers resulted as follows, the choice being made unanimous:

President—P. J. Sheridan, Claremont;

Vice president—C. H. Sanders, Nashua; W. H. Wilkins, Milford; C. H. Bean, Franklin Falls; Frank H. Harvey, Manchester; John P. Work, Lancaster; G. A. Swain of Dover;

Secretary—George L. Osgood, Concord;

Treasurer—John D. Randall, Portsmouth;

Executive committee—W. O. King, Concord, 2 years; E. P. Harrington, Ashland, 2 years; George F. Whitney, Nashua, 1 year; Fred W. Bond, Manchester, 1 year; C. D. L. Jr., Portsmouth, 3 years; Louis H. Steuerwald, Dover, 3 years.

Sargent-at-Arms—Leon C. Hall, Milford.

A vote of thanks was passed to the city for its hospitality and to the Portsmouth department for courtesies. It was also voted that claims for colds contracted at fires would not be allowed. The reports of the officers showed every part of the association to be in first-class condition, financially and socially.

Following the business meeting there was an elegant banquet served in the banquet room of Odd Fellows' hall. At the close of the dinner, the association, headed by the Kearsarge flute and drum band, marched to the P. K. & Y. Ferry landing on Ceres street, where the steamer Alice Howard was taken for a sail in the harbor.
